

Joan Heimler Legacy of Life Scholarship Application

Background

Every year, hundreds of thousands of lives are saved and improved through the transplantation of donated organs and tissues. As a nurse, Joan Heimler, exemplified a passion for caring for families during a most difficult time by offering a way to have their loved ones live on by helping others. Because of a family request, Joan established the Wisconsin Tissue Bank so their loved one's tissues could help others in need.-The Joan Heimler Legacy of Life Scholarship, funded by Versiti, is awarded annually to a registered nurse working in Critical Care or the Emergency Department who actively supports organ and tissue donation and demonstrates compassionate care for all patients and families.

Award

The award winner will receive a $2,000 scholarship to attend the annual American Association of Critical Care (AACN) National Teaching Institute & Critical Care Exposition or the Emergency Nurses Association Annual Meeting. The scholarship can be used for conference registration fee, travel and accommodation expenses. Award money must be applied toward the current year NTI & Critical Care Exposition or ENA Annual Meeting. Award recipient will be required to provide social security number or taxpayer I.D. as a Form 1099-MISC will be issued reflecting proceeds as income to recipient

Scholarship Eligibility

Applicants must be a Registered Nurse working full-time or part-time in critical care or an emergency department in Wisconsin hospital. An individual can only be awarded the scholarship once. Applicants from previous years that did not receive the scholarship are encouraged to reapply. Employees of Versiti are not eligible to apply.

The scholarship is awarded in recognition of a Critical Care or Emergency Department RN who has played an influential role in supporting the donation process and caring for patients and families during their hospital or ED stay. Compassion and support of the family and patient during tissue and organ donation and at end-of life is an area where a nurse can make a significant contribution.

Examples of this role can be seen in but are not limited to:

- Patient care activities while caring for patient during the organ/tissue donation process
- Education of fellow hospital staff, patients and families about organ and tissue donation
- Advocate for organ and tissue donation processes in a hospital or community setting including continuous learning to improve the donation process.
- Demonstration of the values and ethics of both AACN and ENA such as integrity, compassion and respect for human dignity, collaboration, excellence in patient care, patient and family advocacy during the organ/tissue donation process.
- Explore the compassion and care of families and patients needed during the decision process for donation.
